1. In a letter from Dr. K. K. Addicott of the Department of State, dated 3 April 1946, to the Acting Chief, Central Reports Staff, he proposed the setting up of a central index covering all foreign experience information possessed by people in the United States. This letter was referred on 11 April to the Central Planning Staff.

2. During the war, extremely valuable information was obtained by the armed forces from individuals, colleges, foundations and business concerns in the United States. Had the extent and value of this information been known at the outset of the war the information which eventually was obtained could have been earmarked earlier and, in consequence, information which was in many cases obtained too late to be of any value would have been available when needed.

3. Central Planning Staff has conducted an informal survey of this problem and has found that many of the Government's agencies collect information of this nature in the regular course of their business. However, no uniform pattern of collection, recording and indexing is followed, thus minimizing its value for coordinated intelligence purposes.

4. In the course of this informal survey, it was learned that a committee consisting of War, Navy and State Departments, FBI, and Immigration Department currently is working on the problem of centralizing the immigration records which now are decentralized at the various ports of entry. Immigration records constitute one potential source of foreign intelligence information and should be closely related to the whole problem of collection of foreign intelligence from sources in the United States.
